

PRIVILEGE

A privilege is a right unaccompanied by a duty. Thus in most societies babies are accorded the right to be fed and clothed although they can exercise no duties; and in non-socialist societies owners have an absolute right to their property.

In a just society there are no rights without duties, and no duties without rights.

Inv 82926
FT 087