

GUILT & SHAME

Guilt and shame are two different moral feelings. True, guilt sometimes generates shame, but shame is not necessarily related to guilt. For instance, a person's "loss of face" causes him shame, not guilt.

Some anthropologists, <sup>under French influence,</sup> have made guilt & shame the pivots of entire cultures. (Thus Ruth Benedict in The Chrysanthemum and the Sword, Boston: 1946) Margaret Mead, Compar. and Contemp. Society Primitive Peoples (N.York, 1937)
