

FREEDOM: PROPERTY OF INDIVIDUAL - IN SOCIETY

Freedom is neither a property of ~~the~~ isolated individual nor that of society as a whole; freedom is a property of an individual in a society. In some societies there is no individual freedom. In this regard freedom and justice are quite different, for justice is an emergent property of some societies. Strictly speaking there are no free societies (but only free persons in a society), while there are (or could be) just societies.

8205e

241