

Seneca?

VIRTUE IS ITS OWN REWARD (Cicero?)

Virtue is its own reward because, by practising it, one's moral conscience is at ease: nothing to blame oneself for, no excuses to invent, no lies to tell. In addition, virtuous actions may have ostensive good (or bad) consequences.

100 82145
Pt 306